Our town readers will remember the exmiddle of last month by the members of the Cloverport Gymnasium, assisted by a the Cloverport Gymnasium, assisted by a quartette of traveling gymnasts professionally styling themselves the "Big 4." Two of this quartette styled themselves the Courtney Brothers, although they were not related to each other. They were both members of the Louisville Gymnasium, and one of them, known here as "Harry Courtney," is a son of Dr. E. L. Green, of Fifth street, opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel, whose real name is Lon. Green.

On the first day of this month they reached Shawneetown, Ill., and were giving an open air exhibition on the streets of that town. While "Pete" and "Harry Courtney" were going through their trapeze work, "Pete" lost his balance while suspending "Harry," and both fell upon the stones beneath, "Harry" underficath. For some hours the physicians could not tell what the result of his injuriex would be, and when he finally revived, it was only to throw up great clots of blood. Then all hope of his ultimate recovery was given up, and intelligence of the accident telegraphed to his parents in Louisville. Singularly enough, when the dispatch reached the Green mansion in the city, in the parlor, shrouded and coffined, ready for the grave, were the remains of a younger brother George, who had lost his life in a terrible manner, about the same hour that "Harry" met with his mishap, on the elevator of the Southern Dairy in that city. We are pleased to state that, contrary to the opinion and prognostications of the Shawneetown physicians, "Harry" took a favorable turn, and our last intelligence from him was to the effect that he was up and about again, weak and somewhat shaken up, but otherwise uninjured by his terrible fall. His escape from instant death was almost miraculous.

We are enabled this week to give only the aggregate (but official) vote of this county at the recent election. Next week we will publish the vote by precincts.

The greenback candidate (Green) was voted for by the republicans, which accounts for the excess of the latter's vote over that of Weaver, as well as the ghastly skeleton of a vote cast for the regular republican nominee, Mr. Thurmond.

began to howl with a vengeance. Sitting on a step, interrupting no one, saying not a word to any hody, was an old Irishman named James Ganey, familiarly known to all the town as "Uncle Jimmy." The young husiness man aforesaid placed the mouth of his horn close to the old man's ear and blew a loud blast. Several negroes imitated the example of their white-akinned comrade, whereupon the exasperated old fellow raised to his feet, with his pocket-knife open in his hand, and made a sweeping cut around him, fortunately inflicting no injury upon any one save a slight scratch, like that of a pin, on the forehead of a colored blacksmith named Abner Dent. Instantly the cry was raised that Uncle Jimmy had cut Dent—who, by the way, is a republican leader in this city—and but for the prompt interference of Marshal Bohler, promptly backed by several young gentlemen who were onlookers of the pandemonium, he would have been murdered outright. As it was, the old man's protectors were compelled to take him off into the lower town and conceal him.

After the object of their vengeance had been spirited away, the young business man whose folly had started the excitement, extending the countract that he was about as much fitted to perform as Henry twast decision for the beautonite that he was about as much fitted to perform as Henry twast Beecher would be to be appointed a custodian of the keys of heaven.

next morning (Thursday) produced an incident that filled the whole town with horror. It was nothing more than an open in-vocation to the wild and lawless spirit of mob and riot, which was found tacked on the May building, at the corner of Main and First streets. Here is the atrocious docu-ment in full:

[A Copy.] SPECIAL NOTICE.

We the undersigned, citizens of this town, We the undersigned, citizens of this town, believing as we do that the right shall prevait and that every man shall be protected under the law, guarantee that such right shall be protected. It having been said to us that an inofensive and law abiding citizen was attempted to be murdered by the hand of one whom is knows as James Galley.

Therefore be it resolved by the aforesaid citizens that If said James dalley does not quit or leave this county in 43 hours he shall be dealt with as deserves an old and vilinous scoundrel who has long been a nuisance.

COMMITTER.

After it had been exposed to the gaze of the curious passers-by, in the place where its author posted it, it was taken down by Messrs J. L. Miller and Henry Davis, two reputable gentlemen and citizens, who ex-hibited it to several persons who readily recognized the handwriting. Several other specimens of the author's chirography were obtained, and the matter will be laid before the next grand jury by a committee of responsible and substantial citizens.

By turning to page 366 of the general statutes, under the general title of crimes and punishments, will be found an act for the prevention of "kukluxing," the first ection of which reads as follows:

That if any person shall send, circulate, ex hibit, or put up any threatening notice or letter, signed with such person's own or another's name, or anonymously, he shall, on couviction business in order was to elect new officers, thereof, be fined not less than one nor more than five hundred dollars, and imprisoned in the county jail not less than three months.

On motion, the following officers were the county jail not less than three months.

the county jail not less than three months.

The other sections provide graver penalties in the event of injury to the person or property by reason of such notice as the one under consideration.

As the whole matter will be brought to the attention of the next grand jury, we refrain from comment at present, other than to add that our republican follow-citizens who are native born unite with democrats in denouncing this vile attempt to incite a riot in our midst that could have had but one and a terrible ending for the ignorant negroes who might have been incited to precipitate it upon the community, and hence negroes who might have been incited to precipitate it upon the community, and hence the universal judgment is that the law must be rigidly enforced against the reckless individual who evidently, from the language of the above "Notice," contemplated producing a riot; for when lawless mobs are turned loose in their fury, the wild bullet and the wilder flame are not respecters of person or property, and the life and property of the republican citizen is as much endangered as that of the democrat. This is the first event of this kind that has ever transpired in our city, and it is hoped that transpired in our city, and it is hoped that it will be the last.

Dr. Tanner Outdone by a Sheep On the first day of September last, Mr. John R. DeHaven, of this city, rode out to John R. DeHaven, of this city, rode out to the farm of Mr. Henry Ray to take possession of some sheep he had purchased from that gentleman, two of which he intended to bring to town with him as a contribution to the great democratic barbecue of the next day. After leaving Mr. Ray's place, and while driving the flock along the public highway, two or three dogs made their appearance in the road ahead of the animals, causing the latter to break off into the woods at the top of their speed in wild affright. They were all gathered together again except one, and it could not be found, after the most diligent search. Finally, concluding that it had become separated from the balance and would make its way back to its native pasture, the remainder back to its native pasture, the remainder of the flock were driven on to Mr. Della-

It transpiring that the missing sheep did It transpiring that the missing sheep did not return to Mr. Ray's, diligent search was made for it in the forest, but unavailingly. A creek runs through the timber, and there are many and high cliffs slong its sides. When down on the level at the foot of the cliffs the missing animal could be heard bleating apparently at the top, while, at the top of the cliff, the bleating seemed to come from the levels below. But no glimpse of the sheep fewarded the eyes of the searchers.

THE CLOVERPORT BRIDGE.

The election passed off exceedingly quiet in this city, there being no disturbance of any kind to mar the day.

Wednesday night quite an anxious crowd besieged the post-office, on First street, waiting for the arrival of the Louisville dailies to ascertain the result of the election.

When the papers came, the absence of the Courier-Journal's chicken and presence of the Commercial's coon told the sad story to some and the glad story to others.

As soon as the news spread through town, the negroes began to flock to the store of a young man who is their prophet, philosopher and friend, na if by common consent, and in a few minutes he supplied them with horns and then Rome began to howl with a vengeance. As it was, the old man's protectors were compelled to take him off into the lower town and conceal him.

After the object of their vengeance had been spirited away, the young business man whose folly had started the excitement, exhorted them to retire to their homes and drawm of Garfield, as they had had fun enough for one night. They took his advice and slowly and sullenly, but still breathing threats, dispersed.
